The Fund gained 3.0% in June. Global share markets, led by the US, made solid gains in the month on easing geopolitical tensions in the Middle East and hopes of a more market friendly trade policy from President Trump. The US and China finalised a framework for further talks and the White House plans to reach agreements with ten major trading partners in the coming weeks.

The technology sector and AI related companies outperformed in June with market darlings Nvidia and Microsoft strong performers. Defensive sectors such as consumer staples, real estate and utilities underperformed.

Positive contributors in June included software company Oracle (+32.1%), after reporting solid quarterly results, primarily driven by strong cloud growth in its Oracle Cloud Infrastructure segment. In addition, Oracle's backlog continues to grow with remaining performance obligations (RPO), the key indicator of future revenue, hitting a record level in June. Industrial services provider API Group (+9.4%) continued its strong run after being included in the S&P Midcap 400 index. Internet giant Amazon (+7.0%) also made strong gains driven by continued strength in Amazon Web Services (AWS), its cloud computing platform. AWS remains the largest cloud computing provider globally and is well positioned as more companies move their IT infrastructure to the cloud. We have been increasing our position size. Other outperformers included UK real estate broker Jones Lang Lasalle (+14.9%) and Microsoft (+8.0%).

Negative contributors included UK bank NatWest Group (-2.5%), as investors took profits after a strong run. Defensive companies such as bottling company Coca-Cola Europacific Partners (+1.0%), were out of favour this month.

Closer to home, Australasian markets underperformed the US in June. In major news, NZ technology company Xero acquired US payments provider Melio to strengthen its position with US small and medium sized businesses. The Fund participated in the Xero capital raise.

Looking ahead, we expect elevated volatility driven by evolving trade policies and elevated geopolitical uncertainty. We remain well-diversified, positioning the portfolio to perform across a variety of economic scenarios.
