The Fund returned 0.7% last month, bringing the one-year return to 9.3%. Market volatility picked up in February as investors grew concerned about falling US growth. This saw shares sell-off and bonds rally. The Fund has navigated this period well due to active decisions across asset allocation and stock selection.

In late January, the Fund's exposure to US shares was reduced as we became concerned about a slowing in growth. At the same time, exposure to bonds was increased. This meant the Fund had only very modest exposure to shares (approximately 16%) and a much greater exposure to bonds (approximately 60%). With bonds rallying sharply over the month, this delivered positive returns for the Fund even as share markets fell. The type of stocks we have also helped as the falls in shares were concentrated in the high growth stocks in the US. More defensive shares and those tied to interest rates fared much better, again helping the Fund deliver positive performance.

Looking ahead, it is likely that share and bond markets continue to be choppy. US policies around tariffs and cuts to government spending are increasing uncertainty and weighing on sentiment. However, the underlying US economy is strong and whilst growth is slowing it is unlikely to be negative. The rest of the developed world is also supported by falling interest rates and in Europe, increased fiscal spending is on the cards. The outlook for returns remains reasonable, partly due to the solid returns available from bonds which can cushion returns, even if economic growth slows more sharply.

1. The Fund does not have a performance benchmark, hence a market index has been included for comparison purposes. See the Statement of Investment Policy and Objectives for more details on the market index. The market index is a blend of indices that represent the Fund's neutral asset allocation. Note the Fund's investment strategy is designed to achieve its objective, which may mean that at times, the returns of the market index may not be an appropriate measure. 2. After the Base Fund Fee but before tax. 3. The yield to maturity is not an indicator of future return, but reflects the current yield to maturity of the fund's underlying holdings (before tax and after the base fund fee). 4. Where applicable, the Base Fund Fee includes an estimate of non-related underlying fund charges. 5. The Total Fund Fees comprise the Base Fund Fee and any estimated Performance Fee. Please refer to the Product Disclosure Statement for more information as to how these are calculated. 6. Please note past performance is not a guarantee of future returns.
