The Fund fell 2.8% last month, bringing the one-year return to 2.1%. Investors had to deal with yet another bout of volatility last month as the US strikes on Iran and closure of the Strait of Hormuz sent oil prices up over 60%.

Recalling the Ukraine energy shock, investors feared another bout of inflation and priced central banks to hike interest rates in response, sending short-term bonds sharply lower. These short-term bonds are a key asset class for the Fund. So, whilst one month performance was impacted by this repricing, it did also offer opportunities to add to these. We see particular value in NZ bonds that are offering elevated yields as we think that central banks are very unlikely to hike interest rates in this environment. Higher bond yields on offer today should support Fund performance going forward.

Shares also fell, as investors worried over the impacts on global growth. The Fund was underweight shares for much of the month but took advantage of the weakness and added some exposure back towards the end of the month. Cushioning some of the asset price moves in the month was the Fund's small US dollar exposure, as the NZ dollar fell 4% in the month. The outlook remains uncertain, but asset prices have moved to reflect that uncertainty, providing select opportunities for investment across bonds, currencies and shares.

1. The Fund does not have a performance benchmark, hence a market index has been included for comparison purposes. See the Statement of Investment Policy and Objectives for more details on the market index. The market index is a blend of indices that represent the Fund's neutral asset allocation. Note the Fund's investment strategy is designed to achieve its objective, which may mean that at times, the returns of the market index may not be an appropriate measure. 2. After the Base Fund Fee but before tax. 3. The yield to maturity is not an indicator of future return, but reflects the current yield to maturity of the fund's underlying holdings (before tax and after the base fund fee). 4. Where applicable, the Base Fund Fee includes an estimate of non-related underlying fund charges. 5. The Total Fund Fees comprise the Base Fund Fee and any estimated Performance Fee. Please refer to the Product Disclosure Statement for more information as to how these are calculated. 6. Please note past performance is not a guarantee of future returns.
