In November the Fund fell 0.4%, bringing the one-year return to 6.6%. The Fund delivered a negative return for the first time since March, dragged down by a weaker Australian share market and negative returns from NZ bonds.

Volatility in global share markets had been building in October and increased last month with global shares correcting almost 5%. This was related to fears around technology company valuations and financing of AI-related spending going forward. Strong Nvidia (semiconductor company) results were overshadowed by the success of technology giant Google's latest AI model. This saw Nvidia shares drop 12.6% but Google shares rally 13.6%. Over the month we have reduced Nvidia whilst adding more to Google.

Elsewhere, the UK budget was received relatively well by investors who had braced for the worst. Our UK investments performed well last month including utility company SSE plc up 14.7% and bank NatWest Group up 8.3%. In fixed income, NZ bonds fell after the Reserve Bank of New Zealand delivered what could be the last interest rate cut in this cycle. The Fund had reduced NZ bond exposure significantly ahead of this event. Furthermore, we added NZ dollar exposure into weakness and the Fund is now modestly overweight to the NZ dollar.

Looking ahead, we expect a stronger global economy next year as tariff impacts pass and government spending supports growth. This argues for a broader positive equity performance rather than the narrow technology rally of recent years.
