The Fund fell 5.9% in June, in another challenging month for global share markets.

In our international portfolio, standout performers were defensive companies in both the consumer staples and pharmaceutical sectors, as well as companies that benefit from volatility, such as exchanges. The top contributor in June was Chicago Mercantile Exchange (CME, +3.5%), the largest derivatives exchange in the world, which facilitates trading of a wide range of products including interest rates, shares, foreign exchange, energy and commodities. CME has proven a relative safe haven in market corrections, as increased uncertainty in the world creates more volatility in financial markets and more trading activity. Another strong performer was US pharmaceutical company Bristol-Myers Squibb (+2.8%), that has an exciting pipeline of new drugs and benefits from its massive scale. We think valuations are compelling and have been adding to our position in Bristol, as well as researching other interesting pharmaceutical companies. Other outperformers included defensive retailers Costco (+2.8%) and Tractor Supply (+3.5%).

In a reversal of last month, energy related companies such as Shell (-10.2%) and EOG resources (-18.3%) were weak in June, as energy prices fell. United States hotel chain Wyndham Hotels & Resorts (-17.6%) was weak for a second month despite strong occupancy rates and booming domestic travel in the US. We are currently reviewing our position.

Closer to home, Australasian markets were also weak in June. Strong performers included KFC owner Collins Foods (+7.5%) and supermarket owner Woolworths (+2.7%). Negative contributors were miners IGO (-21.4%) and Sandfire (-19.4%) with weakness in lithium prices and other industrial metals. Qantas Airways (-18.9%) was weak, despite better-than-expected earnings, as investors remain concerned about high jet fuel prices and service reliability issues.

Looking ahead, while the economic outlook does remain uncertain, it looks like inflation is close to the peak. This is positive as it will allow policymakers to ease the pace of interest rate rises as we move through the balance of 2022. For now, we remain defensively positioned and anticipate more volatility ahead.
