The Fund fell 3.4% in September. Global share markets were weak in September, with sharply higher bond yields increasing borrowing costs, and rising oil prices heightening inflation concerns. Softness was broad-based across sectors, with energy the only sector ending the month in positive territory.

The top contributor was Shell (+8.1%), benefiting from the oil price rally. Our Sustainable Investing Team recently connected with Shell to discuss its approach to the energy transition and ensure its targets are aligned with the Paris Agreement on climate. Shell has made significant investments in renewable energy, however we are advocating for an absolute scope three emissions reduction target. Teck Resources (+4.5%), was another outperformer, and long term is well placed to benefit from the energy transition. Demand for commodities will increase as the global energy mix shifts to renewables, and electric vehicle adoption accelerates. Other outperformers included Bank of Ireland (+1.0%) and internet giant Meta (+1.5%).

Negative contributors included some of our more defensive holdings. HCA Healthcare (-11.1%), the largest private hospital operator in the United States, was surprisingly weak. Our recent update with the company confirmed the robust fundamentals and we topped up our holding. Other detractors included software companies Nice Ltd (-12.7%) and SS&C Technologies (-8.5%).

Australasian markets also fell in September with relative outperformers including natural gas producer Santos (+3.0%) and Boss Energy (+39.8%). Negative contributors included biotech company CSL (-7.6%) and lithium and nickel miner IGO (-3.1%).

Looking ahead, we expect sluggish economic growth with high interest rates impacting consumer spending and business investment. While we are close to the tail end of the monetary tightening cycle, share markets will likely remain volatile as interest rates may stay higher for an extended period. The Fund continues to deploy cash into our strongest ideas, that are aligned with our favourite investment themes.
