The Fund rose 0.9% in September. After a weak start to the month, global share markets rebounded as the world's most important central bank, the US Federal Reserve, cut interest rates by half of a percent. In other major news, policymakers in China announced a raft of measures to revive the economy and restore confidence in the housing market.

Positive contributors in September included software platform AppLovin (+40.6%), on the back of several broker upgrades and price target increases. There is a growing appreciation for the growth in its software platform and its nascent e-commerce advertising business. Mining company Teck Resources (+10.1%) bounced back, as China policy stimulus is expected to accelerate demand for commodities. Software company Salesforce (+8.4%) outperformed after releasing solid second quarter results with improving operating margins. The company also announced the launch of "Agentforce", a suite of autonomous AI agents designed to perform data-driven actions that will improve customer satisfaction and drive productivity growth. Other strong contributors included social media giant Meta (+9.9%) and US online trading platform Interactive Brokers (+8.1%).

Negative contributors included health insurer Elevance Health (-6.3%), on concerns that elevated healthcare utilisation could impact Medicaid margins. We are confident the company can manage these pressures and we continue to see long term valuation support. Industrial services provider APi Group (-7.1%) underperformed, as investors rotated out of small caps. However, we expect the company to deliver solid growth and margin expansion over time. Semiconductor equipment company ASML (-7.8%) pulled back on regulatory concerns.

Closer to home, the Australian market outperformed, with miners such as Rio Tinto (+12.5%) benefitting from the China stimulus announcement. Other positive contributors included New Zealand accounting software provider Xero (+4.6%).

Looking ahead, global economic growth remains resilient, supported by central bank interest rate cuts. We remain well diversified, enabling the portfolio to perform in a variety of economic scenarios.
