In December the Fund returned 0.1%, bringing the one-year return to 9.1%. Markets were relatively calm in December, with muted moves across most asset classes. Share markets were mixed with a softer US market contrasting with stronger markets in Europe/UK.

It was also encouraging to see the Australian share market recovering some of its recent underperformance, helping performance as the Fund has been increasing its allocation to Australian shares into recent weakness. Australian and NZ bond markets were also weaker as investors now no longer expect further interest rate cuts from the central banks. This caused underperformance of NZ/Australian bonds and these now look more attractive vs US equivalents, offering us opportunity to add exposure into this weakness. Bond market moves also helped the NZ and Australian dollars to rally versus other currencies, again boosting performance as we have been increasing exposure to local currencies over the past month or so.

Calm markets in the month were a welcome respite after the volatility seen in 2025. Whilst the economic outlook for 2026 looks encouraging, elevated share valuations mean investors should expect more volatility in the year ahead, although this could be in both directions. The Fund is well diversified, invested in a broader range of sectors and geographies and this should help cushion volatility. Attractive bond yields in NZ and Australian bonds also should underpin returns going forward.
