The Fund returned 0.9% in April, bringing the one-year return to 2.6%. Global shares rebounded strongly last month, and this helped the Fund deliver its return. But share market performance was quite narrow, in that it was only large US technology companies that delivered very strong returns. In fact, broad share price performance was otherwise quite lacklustre, with NZ, Australian and European shares only delivering modest performance.

The bulk of the Fund's investments remain in short-term bonds. After a difficult performance in March, these positions stabilised in April with a small positive performance. Investors remain wary that an energy-driven inflation surge will leave central banks no option but to hike rates again. These hikes are already priced into markets. For example, the market is pricing the RBNZ to lift interest rates by 1% over the coming 12 months. We think it is unlikely that rate hikes of this magnitude will happen and consequently we continue to like short term bond investments, particularly in NZ.

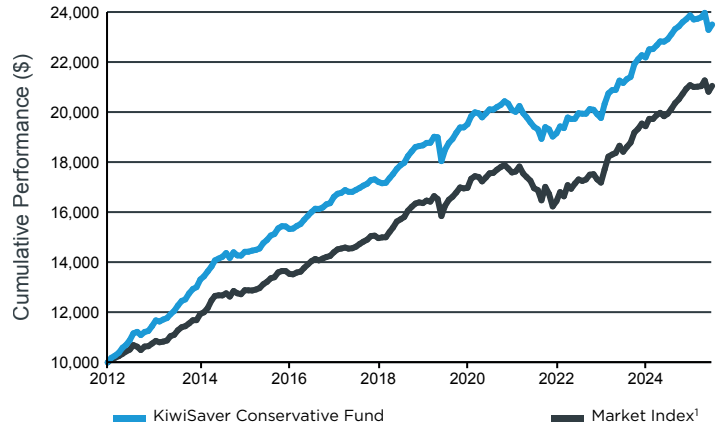

Looking ahead, these short-term bonds will continue to anchor fund performance and should continue to deliver solid returns in excess of cash. Meanwhile, we continue to be patient and await good opportunities to add to investments as they arise.

1. The Fund does not have a performance benchmark, hence a market index has been included for comparison purposes. See the Statement of Investment Policy and Objectives for more details on the market index. The market index is a blend of indices that represent the Fund's neutral asset allocation. Note the Fund's investment strategy is designed to achieve its objective, which may mean that at times, the returns of the market index may not be an appropriate measure. 2. After the Base Fund Fee but before tax. 3. The yield to maturity is not an indicator of future return, but reflects the current yield to maturity of the fund's underlying holdings (before tax and after the base fund fee). 4. Where applicable, the Base Fund Fee includes an estimate of non-related underlying fund charges. 5. The Total Fund Fees comprise the Base Fund Fee and any estimated Performance Fee. Please refer to the Product Disclosure Statement for more information as to how these are calculated. 6. Please note past performance is not a guarantee of future returns.
