Although the Fund retained a cautious stance with a lower exposure to bonds, a reduced share exposure and more cash, it was insufficient to prevent a disappointing loss (-0.8% in the month). Bonds continue to form the predominant Fund exposure, but they remained pressured by rising market interest rates, albeit the negative impact on the Fund was cushioned by having partially reduced exposure to rising market interest rates. Performance across the Fund's shares was mixed. Some sectors continue to see prices adjust lower to reflect a less supportive policy outlook and potentially lower earnings growth, but there were also pockets of strength. Australasian utilities and banks (e.g. Westpac +12.4%) were generally stronger, while commodity related exposures benefitted from higher prices (e.g. US gas exporter Cheniere +19.1%).

We have continued to hold off from adding back to the Fund's lower than long-run neutral exposure to bonds. Some valuations are however approaching levels which may offer attractive medium-term returns for their risk. Ultimately, we believe the higher interest rate backdrop should benefit future fund returns but for now we will be very selective in buying bonds.

This approach also holds for the Fund's share allocation, which remains lower than its long-run neutral. We had been diversifying away from companies with more elevated valuations, and companies more likely to be negatively impacted by higher interest rates. That included a lower allocation to traditional income shares. While we remain wary of the risk for further share market weakness, increasingly we are finding company shares which may afford attractive medium-term returns. We will therefore look to opportunistically add such shares while continuing to limit broad share market exposure.

Looking ahead, we think the Fund is well placed to deliver moderate returns over its recommended investment timeframe. The transition to a higher level of market interest rates is well progressed. For now, we will retain a lower than long-term neutral exposure to interest rates, and a higher cash balance at the expense of less corporate bonds and shares. As discussed, we will look to invest some of this cash selectively should valuations at the individual bond and share level provide attractive medium-term returns.
