The Fund returned 0.9% in January, bringing the one-year return to 6.6%.

Rising markets continue to support positive returns for the Fund, and the past three months have been particularly strong. But the pace of the rally is slowing. January saw shares outperform bonds, a notable change from the positively correlated performance that we have been used to. This outperformance is likely due to rising optimism around US economic growth. That said, the rally in shares was modest, but the stocks we hold collectively outperformed broader share markets.

Notable winners were US hospital operator HCA Healthcare (+12.6%) and AI beneficiary Meta (+10.2%), amidst a swathe of strongly performing stocks for us last month. The Fund continues to be fully invested in our underlying growth funds, in order to harness our stock selection capabilities. Broad equity exposure has been reduced via derivatives, with the Fund's position fluctuating around an underweight position. The Fund has benefitted from strong performance from corporate bonds over the past three months. But with current valuations now less attractive, exposure to these assets is being reduced.

Looking ahead, after three strong months it is reasonable to expect returns to flatten out. We continue to think medium returns can be reasonable, boosted by the stock selection opportunities we are finding.
