The Fund delivered -0.4% in March, bringing the one-year return to 0.6%.

March saw both stock and bond markets rally in a somewhat unsustainable fashion. The banking crisis in the US looks to be contained. But one implication is that bank lending will be more cautious going forward – this is yet another headwind to economic growth. Bond markets have completely changed their minds on central bank actions over the course of the month and now expect rate cuts at the back end of this year in the US. They may well be right but, if so, then it is likely that shares are being too optimistic on the outlook.

For the Fund, swings in markets continue to represent opportunities. For example, we used weakness in Australian shares last month to significantly add exposure, helping capture the bounce in those shares towards the end of the month. Exposure to the financial sector did drag on performance in the month as our positions gave back previous gains. A modestly stronger NZ dollar also hurt, given our increased exposure to foreign currencies.

The global economy has been more resilient than we expected. But we do think that increasing headwinds to growth will drive economic weakness. Much patience has been (and will be) required to await this outcome. In the meantime, the Fund can generate returns from income assets whilst we wait for better opportunities in broader share markets.
