The Fund returned -1.3% in October, bringing the one-year return to 3.1%. For the third month in a row, we had broadly weaker share markets, coupled with weaker bond markets – particularly long-term bonds. The Fund has been positioned to cushion against the risk of this type of price action, with a much-reduced exposure to shares (around 15% lower) and an aversion to owning longer-term bonds. As a result, the Fund has cushioned some of the negative performance from moves in underlying asset prices in the past three, including October.

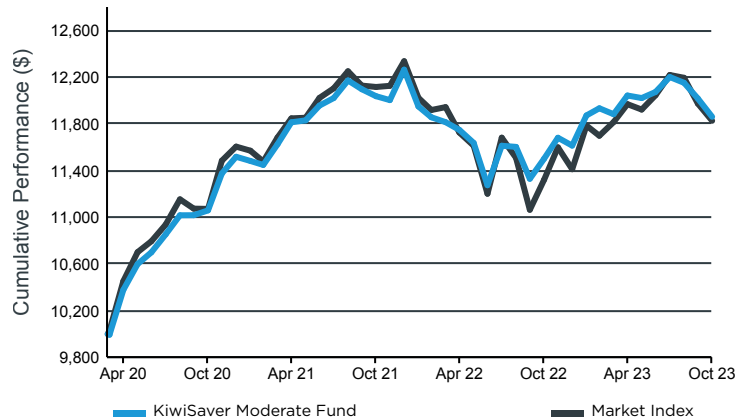

Falling bond and share prices are offering some compelling investment opportunities. Concerns over global economic weakness temper enthusiasm for shares, but cheaper valuations have allowed for a modest increase in share exposure. Meanwhile, we continue to be excited about the return opportunities in intermediate term (2-5 year) corporate bonds. Yields of 7, 8 or 9% are the kind of long run returns that shares tend to offer (global shares have rallied 7% per year on average for the past 30 years). Yet, these bonds have much lower volatility compared to shares, and if we do have economic weakness, these bonds will likely fare much better as their performance is less tied to short-term earnings fluctuations. The Fund continues to find opportunities in currencies and interest rate positions across different regions, as global economies continue to diverge.
