The Fund fell 4.0% in April.

Positive contributors included Mastercard (+1.8%), as card networks benefit from consumer and business travel and entertainment spending. The reopening of stores and restaurants and travel are contributing to further growth this year. Similarly, health insurer Anthem (+2.2%) continues to see solid fundamentals, with membership exceeding market expectations in the March quarter. Healthcare is a defensive sector that should provide some shelter against inflation and growth concerns in the market.

As for detractors, Google-parent Alphabet (-17.7%) reported results that missed short-term expectations. The concern centres on advertising spending in light of the Ukraine-Russia conflict and its impact on broader European consumer marketing. Google has a solid position in sponsored internet search results, which underpins its valuation. Amazon.com (-23.8%), like Alphabet, had one of its worst months since the global financial crisis in 2008-2009. Despite its profitable cloud-computing segment (AWS) growing 37% year over year, investors focused on the outlook for its online shopping segment, which is seeing inflation and weaker-than-expected utilisation.

The Fund focuses on the medium-term opportunity by compounding with strong, profitable 'Future Leaders'. The Fund is actively upgrading the portfolio in light of the opportunity afforded by the market volatility.
